Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Saturday 13 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Snow showers northeast, snow later in west and central parts.

Today:
Snow showers over eastern Scotland becoming confined to Shetland by midday. Elsewhere a largely dry morning with some sunny spells, but cloud and outbreaks of mainly light snow, and perhaps freezing rain, edging northeast into western and central parts. Windy.

Tonight:
Rather cloudy with outbreaks of sleet, snow, perhaps freezing rain, and towards the west coast rain, spreading east. Some clearer spells likely, especially for Central Belt and Moray Firth. Windy.

Sunday:
Mostly cloudy with outbreaks of rain, sleet and snow, with a risk of freezing rain bringing widespread ice, the precipitation becoming mainly rain later. Some brighter spells in east. Windy.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Rather cloudy through into mid-week with outbreaks of rain or showers. Much milder than recently with a significant thaw of lying snow and generally lighter winds than over the weekend.
